ن

H ن nūn, the thirty-second letter of the Urdū or Hindūstānī alphabet (the twenty-ninth of the Persian, and twenty-fifth of the Arabic). It corresponds, properly speaking, to the dental न na, the twentieth consonant of the Nāgarī or Hindī alphabet (the fifth letter of the fourth or dental class), and has much the sound of the English n (by which it is represented in the Roman character); but it is also used to represent the Nāgarī nasals ङ, ञ, and ण, and also the anusvār (\?\), and the anunāsik, or ćandr-vindu ँ, and hence has, very frequently, a nasal sound, represented in the Roman character by ṅ (except in the case of ण, which is Romanized by ṇ), e.g. saṅgat, saṅsār, dāṅt, sāṅp, ghūṅṭ, soṅṭā, pheṅṭa; indeed, the general tendency is to nasalize the nūn when it is quiescent after a long vowel or a diphthong, whether in the middle or at the end of a word; and that even in cases where the n is really dental (e.g. zamāṅ for zamān, zamīṅ for zamīn, zabūṅ for zabūn, &c.). Nūn or n quiescent, preceded by a short vowel, and followed by the letter b, or p, generally has the sound of m, e.g. سنپت sampat, منبر mimbar. Nūn or n is occasionally substituted for l, as nūrī = lūrī, nā or nī (dim. aff.)=lā or lī; these, and other similar substitutions, will be found noticed in their proper places. In reckoning by abjad, n denotes 50; and, in almanacs, it signifies the conjunct aspect of the stars:—na-kār, s.m. The letter, or the sound, na.

و

و wāw or wā`o, is the thirty-third letter of the Urdū alphabet (the thirtieth of the Persian, and the twenty-sixth of the Arabic alphabet). As a consonant (that is to say, when it stands at the beginning of a word or syllable) it has the sound of the English w (or, occasionally, of v), and corresponds to व wa or va, the twenty-ninth consonant of the Nāgarī or Hindī alphabet. This letter is very commonly interchanged with b; for all words therefore beginning with w or v, but not found in the following pages, see under the letter b. The letter wā`o not beginning a word or syllable is termed ḥarf-e-`illat, 'a weak letter,' and serves with the vowel-points ẓamma and fatḥa written over the preceding consonant to form the long vowels ū and o and the diphthong au, as has been shown at the commencement of this work. In reckoning by abjad (q.v.), the letter wā`o stands for 6; and in ephemerides it represents Friday, and the sign Libra.
